We will continue to invest in our best-in-class originations team to support the company's credit-first underwriting philosophy. Runway Growth has prudently added to our leverage levels and enters the second half of the year with the requisite capital to fund portfolio growth, execute against our long-term strategy, and drive shareholder value."

Portfolio Construction and Management

Runway Growth's ability to provide stability across our portfolio is a testament to the success of our durable credit-focused model in a challenging macroeconomic backdrop. The company's extensive due diligence process and proprietary risk analytics have supported the construction of a high quality, well-performing portfolio, that should support growth of our net investment income and allow us to continue to provide quality companies with minimally dilutive growth capital.

At June 30, 2022, our portfolio included 27 debt investments and 49 equity investments (which includes warrants received in conjunction with debt financings) in 43 portfolio companies – consisting of late and growth-stage businesses in technology, life sciences, healthcare, information services, and select consumer services and products industries. Ongoing communication with our portfolio companies is part of normal business operations and the Runway Growth team has proactively increased the frequency given the dynamic market landscape.

During the second quarter of 2022, we continued to benefit from our credit first approach to the venture debt and growth lending business. Our efforts to build a weather-proof portfolio positions us to perform well in any economic condition we may face in 2022 and beyond. It is also reflected in the quality of our portfolio. In general, our borrowers recorded attractive year over year growth, while also building sustainable backlogs and successfully managing increasing input and labor expenses. Rising interest rates, inflationary impacts on wages, and other supply chain costs are top of mind for our borrowers' management teams. Nearly all of our portfolio companies slowed or deferred hiring plans in anticipation of potential macroeconomic headwinds. Additionally, portfolio companies have made selective expense reductions, while establishing multi-level action plans that may be deployed if market conditions necessitate. We continue to actively monitor our partner companies, with frequent communications as a key component of our approach to building a durable portfolio with stable growth.

Market Conditions

Runway Growth will practice prudence as economic conditions unfold. With waning exit activity and downward pressure on valuations, venture capital investors have adopted more reserved outlooks as evidenced by decreases in completed deal value. Though ample dry powder exists, deployment is likely to remain subdued until markets stabilize. This environment makes Runway Growth's capital attractive and increases the number of high-quality investment opportunities we are able to originate. Our investment advisor is expanding its origination and credit teams in order to capitalize on these market conditions. We will continue to originate and make investments in line with our portfolio risk mitigation strategy while closely monitoring broader economic developments.
